Effects of family dynamics

Some of the effects of family dynamics include the following:

- Creation of squatter camps and overcrowding due to migration.
- Child abuse when children are left behind.
- Fights when people of different religions marry.
- Leaving the country by one of the parents to look for employment elsewhere results in a one parent family. If both parents are alive and not divorced, they should look after their children together instead of leaving them in the hands of strangers or relatives.
- Divorce or separation of parents may be a problem to the children.
- Some dynamics promote child marriages.
